STEEL SALES ARE INCREASING

Demand for Metal Products So Great that Industry Will Show No Falling Off This Year-Prices of Raw Cotton Rising-Activity in Shoes-May Clearances Small.

New York, June 7 .- R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade to-morrow will

"Adverse weather has made the season another week late, both as to distribution of spring merchandise and progress of the crops. Transactions during the few days of seasonable weather thus far indiut much business, but so much time has been lost that few merchants anticipate a normal volume in the aggregate, and large stocks will be carried over or sacrificed at bargain sales.

"On the farms the situation is critical, but a few weeks of high temperature will make the outlook much brighter, except that extensive replanting adds heavily to the cost of the crops. Wholesale trade in fall and winter goods is brisk, large duplicate purchases, because of the cold spring. having depleted stocks in the hands of at full capacity in most industries, cotton mills making remarkably favorable returns in view of the weather and cost of
